If I were lightly disposed, I could still perhaps have offers, that some, who hold their heads higher, would be glad to accept. Swift's Story of an injured Lady.
7. Nimble; with agility; not heavily or tardily.
Methought I flood on a wide river's bank;
When on a sudden, Torismond appear'd,
Gave me his hand, and led me lightly o'er;
Leaping and bounding on the billows heads;
Till safely we had reach'd the farther shore. Dryden.
8. Gaily; airily; with levity; without heed or care.
LIGHTMINDED. adj. [light and mind.] Unsettled; unsteady.
He that is hasty to give credit is lightminded. Ecl. xix. 4.
- LIGHTNESS. n. f. [from light.]
1. Levity; want of weight; absence of weight.
Some are for masts of ships, as fir and pine, because of their length, straightness, and lightness. Bacon's Nat. Hist.
Suppose many degrees of littleness and lightness in particles; so as many might float in the air a good while before they fell. Burnet's Theory of the Earth.
2. Inconstancy; unsteadiness.
For, unto knight there is no greater flame,
Than lightness and inconstancy in love. Fairy Queen.
Of two things they must chuse one; namely, whether they would, to their endless disgrace, with ridiculous lightness, dismiss him, whose restitution they had in so important manner desired, or else condescend unto that demand. Hooker.
- As I blow this feather from my face,
Obeying with my wind when I do blow,
And yielding to another when it blows,
Commanded always by the gentlest gulf;
Such is the lightness of you common men. Shakespeare.
3. Unchastity; want of conduct in women.
Is it the disdain of my estate, or the opinion of my lightness, that have emboldened such base fancies towards me?
Sidney, b. ii.
- Can it be,
That modesty may more betray our sense,
Than woman's lightness. Shaksp. Measure for Measure.
4. Agility; nimbleness.
LIGHTNING. n. f. [from lighten, lightening, lightning.]
1. The flash that attends thunder.
Lightning is a great flame, very bright, extending every way to a great distance, suddenly darting upwards, and there ending, so that it is only momentaneous. Muschenbrot.
Sense thinks the lightning born before the thunder;
What tells us then they both together are?
Salmonous, full ring cruel pains I found
For emulating Jove; the rattling found
Of mimic thunder, and the glitt'ring blaze
Of pointed lightnings, and their forked rays. Dryd. Æn.
No warning of the approach of flame,
Swiftly, like sudden death, it came;
Like travellers by lightning kill'd.
I burnt the moment I beheld. Granville.
2. Mitigation; abatement.
How oft when men are at the point of death,
Have they been merry? which their keepers call
A lightning before death. Shaksp. Romeo and Juliet.
We were once in hopes of his recovery, upon a kind message from the widow; but this only proved a lightning before death. Addison's Spectator, No. 517.
- LIGHTS. n. f. [supposed to be called so from their lightness in proportion to their bulk.] The lungs; the organs of breathing.
The complaint was chiefly from the lights, a part as of no quick sense, so no feat for any sharp disease. Hayward.
- LIGHTSOME. adj. [from light.]
1. Luminous; not dark; not obscure; not opaque.
Neither the sun, nor any thing sensible is that light itself, which is the cause that things are lightsome, though it make itself, and all things else, visible; but a body most enlightened, by whom the neighbouring region, which the Greeks call æther, the place of the supposed element of fire, is effected and qualified. Raleigh.
White walls make rooms more lightsome than black. Bac.
Equal posture, and quick spirits, are required to make colours lightsome. Bacon's Nat. History.

His course exalted through the Ram had run Through Taurus, and the lightsome realms of love. Dryd.
2. Gay; airy; having the power to exhilarate.
It suiteth so fitly with that lightsome affection of joy, wherein God delighteth when his saints praise him. Hooker.
The lightsome passion of joy was not that which now often usurps the name; that trivial, vanishing, superficial thing, that only gilds the apprehension, and plays upon the surface of the soul. South's Sermons.
- LIGHTSOMENESS. n. f. [from lightsome.]
1. Luminousness; not opacity; not obscurity; not darkness-ness. It

cedar trees beside the water. Num. xxiv. 6.
- LIGNEOUS. adj. [ligneus, Latin; ligneux, French.] Made of wood; wooden; resembling wood.
It should be tried with shoots of vines, and roots of red roses; for it may be they, being of a more ligneous nature, will incorporate with the tree itself. Bacon's Nat. Hist.
Ten thousand seeds of the plant harts-tongue, hardly make the bulk of a pepper-corn: now the covers, and the true body of each feed, the parenchymous and ligneous part of both, and the fibres of those parts, multiplied one by another, afford a hundred thousand millions of formed atoms, but how many more we cannot define. Grew's Cosmol.
- LIGNUM/VITÆ. n. f. [Lat.] Guaiacum; a very hard wood.
It hath pinnated leaves; the flower consists of several petals, which are placed orbicularly, and expand in form of a rose; the point of the flower, which arises from the cen-

Or to lace his defects. Milton's Paradise Lost, b. viii.
Two likes may be mistaken. L'Estrange's Fab.
She'd study to reform the men,
Or add some grains of folly more,
To women than they had before;
This might their mutual fancy strike,
Since ev'ry being loves its like. Swift.
2. Near approach; a state like to another state. A sense common, but not just.
Report being carried secretly from one to another in my ship, had like to have been my utter overthrow. Raleigh.
- LIKE. adv.
1. In the same manner; in the same manner as.
The joyous nymphs, and lightfoot fairies,
Which thither came to hear their music sweet;
Now hearing them so heavily lament,
Like heavily lamenting from them went. Spenser.

LIK

- Like* as a father pitieth his children, so the Lord pitieth them that fear him. Psal. ciii. 13.

God and Messiah. Milton's Paradise Lost, b. vi.
- TO LIKE. v. n.
1. To be pleased with, with of before the thing approved.
Obsolete.
Of any thing more than of God they could not by any means like, as long as whatsoever they knew besides God, they apprehended it not in itself without dependancy upon God. Hooker, b. i.
The young soldiers did with such cheerfulness like of this resolution, that they thought two days a long delay. Kneller.
It is true, there are limits to be set betwixt the boldness and rashness of a poet; but he must understand those limits who pretends to judge, as well as he who undertakes to write: and he who has no liking to the whole, ought in reason to be excluded from censuring of the parts. Dryden.
2. To chuse; to lift; to be pleased.
The man likes not to take his brother's wife. Deut. xxv. 7.

By any likelihood he shew'd to-day?
That with no man here he is offended. Shakespeare.
2. Resemblance; likeness. Obsolete.
The mayor and all his brethren in best sort,
Like to the senators of antique Rome,
Go forth and fetch their conquering Cæsar in.
As by a low, but loving likelihood,
Were now the general of our gracious empress,
As in good time he may, from Ireland coming,
How many would the peaceful city quit,
To welcome him. Shakespeare's Henry V.
There is no likelihood between pure light and black darkness, or between righteousness and reprobation. Raleigh.
3. Probability; verisimilitude; appearance of truth.
As it noteth one such to have been in that age, so had there
